| REAL RISK OF SIGNIFICANT HARM ANALYSIS  |  |
| HarmSome damage or detriment or injury that could be caused to affected individuals as a result of the incident. The harm must also be “significant.” It must be important, meaningful, and with non-trivial consequences or effects. | The Organization did not specifically identify any harm that could result from the incident but reported that it would “provide 12 months of credit monitoring and identity protection services to affected consumers”. Further, the Organization’s notice to affected individuals recommended they “promptly report any fraudulent activity or any suspected incidence of identity theft” to law enforcement.In my view, the financial information at issue could be used to cause the significant harms of identity theft, fraud and financial loss. Email addresses could be used for phishing purposes. These are significant harms. |
| Real RiskThe likelihood that the significant harm will result must be more than mere speculation or conjecture. There must be a cause and effect relationship between the incident and the possible harm.                             | In its report of the incident, the Organization did not specify the likelihood that harm to affected individuals could result.In my view, the likelihood of harm resulting from this incident is increased because the personal information was compromised due to the malicious action of an unknown third party (deliberate intrusion). Further, the information appears to have been exposed for almost three weeks.  |
| DECISION UNDER SECTION 37.1(1) OF PIPA  |  |
| Based on the information provided by the Organization and given the circumstances of the incident, I have decided that there is a real risk of significant harm to the affected individuals.   |  |

The financial information at issue could be used to cause the significant harms of identity theft, fraud and financial loss. Email addresses could be used for phishing purposes. These are significant harms. The likelihood of harm resulting from this incident is increased because the personal information was compromised due to the malicious action of an unknown third party (deliberate intrusion). Further, the information appears to have been exposed for almost three weeks.

I require the Organization to notify the affected individuals in Alberta in accordance with section 19.1 of the Personal Information Protection Act Regulation (Regulation).

In its report of the incident, the Organization said that it would notify affected individuals beginning October 11, 2017. I require the Organization to confirm to my office within 10 days of this decision that it has notified affected individuals in Alberta in accordance with the Regulation.
