REAL RISK OF SIGNIFICANT HARM ANALYSIS

Harm Some damage or detriment or injury that could be caused to affected individuals as a result of the incident. The harm must also be “significant.” It must be important, meaningful, and with non-trivial consequences or effects.	The Organization did not specifically identify harm(s) that might result from this incident reporting that “...the compromised information for the significant majority of impacted individuals does not give rise to the risk of identity theft”. The notice to affected individuals, however, said “As always, you should be vigilant with respect to the widespread risk of phishing attacks” and offered a subscription to a credit monitoring service. In my view, a reasonable person would consider that the contact, identity, and financial information at issue could be used to cause the harms of identity theft and fraud. Email addresses could be used for phishing, resulting in increased vulnerability to identity theft and fraud. These are all significant harms.
--	--

Real Risk The likelihood that the significant harm will result must be more than mere speculation or conjecture. There must be a cause and effect relationship between the incident and the possible harm.	As noted above, the Organization reported that “...the compromised information for the significant majority of impacted individuals does not give rise to the risk of identity theft”, but nonetheless provided direction for avoiding phishing attacks. In my view, a reasonable person would consider that the likelihood of harm resulting from this incident is increased as the breach was the result of malicious intent (deliberate intrusion) by an unknown third party and it appears the unauthorized access to the email account was used to send fraudulent emails, with the purpose of obtaining information for fraudulent purposes. The Organization cannot rule out the possibility that the unauthorized party viewed, read, copied, or downloaded the affected individuals’ personal information.

DECISION UNDER SECTION 37.1(1) OF PIPA

Based on the information provided by the Organization and given the circumstances of the incident, I have decided that there is a real risk of significant harm to the affected individuals.

A reasonable person would consider that the contact, identity, and financial information at issue could be used to cause the harms of identity theft and fraud. Email addresses could be used for phishing, resulting in increased vulnerability to identity theft and fraud. These are all significant harms.

The likelihood of harm resulting from this incident is increased as the breach was the result of malicious intent (deliberate intrusion) by an unknown third party and it appears the unauthorized access to the email account was used to send fraudulent emails, with the purpose of obtaining information for fraudulent purposes. The Organization cannot rule out the possibility that the unauthorized party viewed, read, copied, or downloaded the affected individuals' personal information.

The Organization is required to notify the affected individuals in Alberta in accordance with section 19.1 of the Personal Information Protection Act Regulation (Regulation).

I understand the Organization provided a preliminary notice to prospective clients on March 27, 2020 and notified most affected individuals by email and mail on April 7 and April 8, 2020, but that contact information was being verified for some affected individuals who would then be notified.

The Organization is required to confirm to my Office in writing, within ten (10) days of the date of this decision, that those individuals whose contact information is being verified have been notified in accordance with the requirements outlined in the Regulation.
