REAL RISK OF SIGNIFICANT HARM ANALYSIS
Harm Some damage or detriment or injury that could be caused to affected individuals as a result of the incident. The harm must also be “significant.” It must be important, meaningful, and with non-trivial consequences or effects.	The Organization’s report of the breach said that it “...is offering the affected individual complimentary credit monitoring and identity theft restoration services”. In my view, a reasonable person would consider that the identity information at issue could be used to cause the significant harms of identity theft and fraud.
Real Risk The likelihood that the significant harm will result must be more than mere speculation or conjecture. There must be a cause and effect relationship between the incident and the possible harm.	The Organization did not provide its assessment of the likelihood of harm resulting from this breach, but reported: After discovering the matter, [the Organization] immediately hired a consulting firm who disabled all unauthorized access to the affected account. DECISION UNDER SECTION 37.1(1) OF PIPA

Based on the information provided by the Organization and given the circumstances of the incident, I have decided that there is a real risk of significant harm to the affected individuals.

A reasonable person would consider that the identity information at issue could be used to cause the significant harms of identity theft and fraud. The likelihood of harm is increased as the breach resulted from malicious action (deliberate, unauthorized access and attempted fraud). It appears the email account was compromised for over 2.5 months before the breach was detected.

I require the Organization to notify the affected individual whose personal information was collected in Alberta, in accordance with section 19.1 of the Personal Information Protection Act Regulation (Regulation).

I understand the Organization notified affected individuals by letter dated March 11, 2020, in accordance with the Regulation. The Organization is not required to notify the affected individual again.
